Moscow Again Warns U.S. on Arms Buildup

MOSCOW, Feb. 22 (UPI). Soviet Defense Minister Dmitri Ustinov today warned the United States and NATO countries that the Soviet Union is capable of matching any armament the West develops.

Mr. Ustinov addressed a meet ing of the leaders of the Soviet armed forces in the Kremlin on the eve of the 60th anniversary of the beginning of the Soviet

And while he said the Soviet military supports the cause of peace and disarmament, he added that it will not hesitate to use the country's resources to respond to weapons development in the West.

Mr. Ustinov said.

the B-1 bomber. It was the second time in three months that the Soviet Union has warned it will respond with an arms buildup if the United States continues developing the neutron bomb. The first warning came from Soviet President Leonid Brezimev late last year.

State Department spokesman Hodding Carter 3d said the Lookheed Aircraft Corp. which makes the planes, has been told that the department no longer approves the export of spare parts or the provision of on-site maintenance by a Lockheed technical team in Libya. The actions against Libys came three days after that country refused landing rights to a Cyprus Airways DC-8 carrying two Palestinian gunmen and 11 hostages. The Palestinians seized the hostages in Cyprus after fatally shooting Youssef Sebal, editor of the Egyptian newspaper Al Ahram. But U.S. officials noted that Libya has granted haven to terrorist groups in the past.

Sadat Cites 'Treachery,' Ends Recognition of Cyprus Chief

Cairo Gives Commandos Public Rites

By Christopher S. Wren CITRO, Feb. 22 (NYT).-Pres ident Anwar Sadat angrily de-clared today that Egypt would no longer recognize Spyros Kypriance as President of Cyprus because of his "treachery" that resulted in the death of 15 Egyptian commandos at Cyprus's Lar-naca Airport on Sunday.

sible, Mr. Sadat implied, unless Mr. Kyprianou handed over the two Arab gummen who had touched off the confrontation by murdering a prominent Egyptian journalist, and explained to Cairo's satisfaction why Cypriot troops had opened fire on the

of some of my sons," Mr. Sadat told an audience of army com-mandos that included participants in the Larnaca operation. He spoke following an emotional public funeral for their slain comrades that turned into an anti-Cypriot and anti-Palestinian demonstration. By his action, Mr. Sadat slammed the door on President Kyprianou's offer yes-terday of personal talks to defuse the confrontation, which has brought traditionally friendly relations between the two countries virtually to the hreaking point. On Monday evening, the Egyptian Cabinet decided to recall diplomatic and other persomel from Cyprus and ask the Cypriots to do likewise

Awkward Situation Diplomats here could not recall a precedent for withdrawing recognition of a head of state, but thought that it could prove awkward for Mr. Kyprianou in his claim to govern all of Cyprus, including the portion under Turkish military control. Mr. Sadat's move was seen as signifying a de facto though not formal break in relations with the Cypriot government.

The crisis began last Saturday when the two Arab gummen killed Youssel Sebai, a prominent Egyp-tian journalist and friend of Mr. Sadat, in Nicosia and then escaped in a commandeered. Cyprus Airways plane with a dozen hostages, including four Egyptians. They flew back to Cyprus's Larnaca Airport on Sunday evening after being refused landing permission elsewhere.

Egypt disputched an airbonne force of commandos, but did not tell the Cypriots that the commandos were abourd the plane for fear of compromising security After weiting an hour and a half for Cypriot authorities to negotiate with the gummen, the communities assistited the hiby heavy fine from the Cypriot Neitional Guard. Egypt and Cyprus have both claimed crefit for the capture of the gunmen, who surrendered with their hos-tages during the battle.

'Hired Criminals' President Sedat was visibly uppet today as he discussed the incident publicly for the first time. He gestured violently and pounded a table when he spoke of the Cypniot President. "Kypriemon wants to see me but there is nothing between us to talk about," he told several hundred army commandos and air-

Vance: Mideast Jets a 'Package'

By John M. Goshko

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (WP). -U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance strongly suggested yesterday that if Congress blocks plans to sell jet fighters to Saudi Arabia or Egypt, the Carter administration will buil back its companion offer of planes for Israel.

The administration, Mr. Vance told Congress, will not accept any attempt to dismantle its proposed $4.3-billion package of advanced jets for the three Middle Eastern countries.

He sidestepped questions from Congress about what the admin-istration will do if Congress bars the sales to either of the Arab countries. But, in an imprompta chat with reporters, Mr. Vance hinted strongly that the administration's proposal was "all or nothing," Mr. Vance shot back: "I said it's a package, That'e what a package is, isn't it?"

Congress Receives Two New Plans on Taxing Americans Abroad

By Robert Sines

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (IRT). -Two additional proposals to completely revise the texation of Americans abroad have been introduced in the Congress during the last 10 days.

One bill, proposed last week by Sen. Dewey Bartlett, R-Okla., would replace the current income exclusion with a series of special deductions. Although it covers much the same ground, the Bartlett tall differs substantially from a proposal by Sen. Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., that was adopted by the Senate Finance Commit-toe carier this month. The other measure, introduced today by Rep. James Jones, D-Otto, and Rep. Philip Crane, R-III. would not only allow the special deductions but would retain the $20,000 ($25,000 for Americans living shroad more than escalator clause based on increases in government pay scales to offset inflation. In addition, the bill would repeal language of the 1976 Tax Reform Act that would make foreign knoome taxes paid on the excluded amount ineligible for credit against U.S. income taxes and would tax income at the higher rates that would apply if the exclusion were not made. The exclusion would be taken in addition to the special deductions.

Such a change, he said, Scylet President Leonid Brezhnev last night condemned U.S. support of Egypt's direct negotiations with Israel but said Moscor still supported a general Middle East peace conference under Soviet-American auspices—as both countres agreed in a joint declaration of policy on Oct. 1.

Mr. Brezhnev's statement, given during a Kremlin dinner in houor of the visiting President of Syria, Hafez al-Assad, who arrived here yesterday on a 2-day visit, was taken here as a sign that the Soviet Union continues to oppose extremist Arab positions, rejects negotiations with Israel in any form, as the Palestinian Liberation Organization urged in an Arab meeting in Libya in Decem-

Mr. Brezhnev added, "The question prompts itself, is it not time to stop the unprincipled political naneuvers in the Middle East and return the issue of settlement to the channel of the Geneva con-

But a conference became highly unlikely once Mr. Sadat made his direct approach to Jerusalem, and, according to one Soviet official, Moscow believes this is why he did it-and why the Israelis welcomed him.

"We still have the goal," the official said, "but it has become more distant-not through our fault, but now the majority of other Arah countries are in no mood to go to Geneva." The United States supported

Mr. Sadat's initiatives to Jerusalem and this month sided with him in objecting to Israeli settlements on occupied territory in the Sinai desert. Syria, and Soviet Union, condemned Mr. Sadat's visit and the Israeli-Exyptian talks from the beginning, and Soviet diplomats were indignant at the extent of U.S. support for them.

But Mr. Brezhnev's remarks indicated that despite Soviet pique over what Moscow sees as the U.S. abandonment of the joint position agreed to last fall, he is not yet prepared to re-

The Soviet Union still supports settlement including the withdrawal of Israeli troops from all occupied Arah lands, Mr. Brezhnev said, and the establishment of an Independent Palestinian

Senate Unit Says Torrijos Ignored Drug Case

By Adam Clymer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 (NYT).

The Senate Select Committee on Intelligence has charged that Panama's head of government, Gen. Omar. Torrijos Herrers, turned a blind eye to narcotics dealings by his brother and other government officials, but said charges that the gen-eral trafficked himself were "second hand and of varying religibility."

A sanitized version of the committee report—debated without the deletions by the full Senate in closed session yester-day—was released by the Sen-ate without a dissenting vote.

The Senate today continued in secret session its examination of classified files on the alleged role of Panamanian officials in drug trafficking, a review that could sway votes on the Pensma Canal treaties, the Associated Press reported.]

[The session ended this afternoon with no apparent shifts in position by senators who have spoken publicly on the issue, AP

The Justice Department made public, meanwhile, a three-count Federal indictment accus-ing Moises Torripos Herrers, the general's brother, of smuggling 155 pounds of heroin into the United States on or about July 8, 1971.

The indictment, which was returned on May 16, 1972, was ordered unsealed yesterday by U.S. District Judge Jack Weinstein in New York.

The drug issue has been seized on by opponents of the treaties to turn the Panama Canal over to Parlame in the year 2000 as indications of that country's im-morality and unreliability, and to argue that Panama would not stand by its commitments.

At the Senate, reports that filtered out from the closeddoor meeting yesterday and today said that the senators listened to arguments and examined classified documents.

But the debate gave no indications of changing any minds. Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan, who has

Warned Brother

The Intelligence Committee report's most definitive statement shout Gen. Torrijos and drug dealers was a flat narrative say-ing that in December, 1972, he warned his brother, Moises, who had been indicted earlier in the United States, that he would be arrested if he entered the Panama Canal zone as he plan-ned. But it said this warning came to the general from "a State Department official, under instructions apparently originat-ing from the White House."

Charges of marcotics trafficking involving the Panamanian leadership have been circulating, and occasionally getting into print in some detail, for several months.

The 20-page committee report, issued without the evidence behind it, neither accuses Gen. Torrijos of personal thrug dealing nor definitively exonerates him. But it asserts flatly that the narcotics issue did not affect pegotiations on the Panama

Bonn Accused of Nazi Protection In Refusing to Control Archives BONN, Feb. 22 (AP) .- The West German government has refused to take possession of Nazi party archives in West Berlin because the documents could embarrass prominent West Germans, a quadiamentary deputy charged yesterday. Karl-Heinz Hansen, a member of the ruling Social Democratic party, said that the Boun government has repeatedly refused to provide him with a straight answer on why it will not take over supervision of the Berlin Documents Center, which has been under U.S. control since 1945. Mr. Hansen said he suspected that the Bonn government's refusal to take over archives was because it "wants to cover up for personalities of public life who are former Nazis." About 8 million persons belonged to the Nazi party, but relatively few have been officially named in West Germany. The center contains virtually all the Nazi documents confiscated by the Allies when they captured Berlin in World War II. The files include Nazi membership lists, party and

Two deputies from the Christian Democratic Union, Gerhard Kunz and Wilhelm Rawe, said that if former Nazis were not being protected then the government should strongly counter this "false impression."

Replying to Mr. Hansen's accusations, the West German Justice Ministry said it was "absolutely wrong" to suppose that the government has no interest in Nazi party documents at the Berlin center or that it may seek to protect public ıl Bon SALISBURY, Rhodesia, Feb. 22 Toky (NYT) In one of the harshest applications of its war policy yet Fulple disclosed, the Rhodesian government has warned blacks living in a tribal area on the country's eastern border that their children will be shot if they venture out TOL A of their native villages, even in devillebt:

The warning was issued in a pamphlet read in Parliament today by one of a number of black opposition members who accused the government of subjecting the country's 4 million black tribesmen to brutal measures in its efforts to isolate black guerrillas challenging the government in a is it is the year old bush war.

The parliamentarians warned that measures providing for curi- few-breakers to be shot and for those assisting guerrillas to Le in hanged, even when the assistance tanta is given under duress, are seriously undermining support for the " :: government and its constitutions! -: mitiative among tribal neonle. "Without the support of the African population; we can never hat a win this war," said William Chimpaka, who, like most of the 18 blocks in the 66 seat assembly, supports the constitutional talks between Prime Minister Ian Smith and three black leaders. The negotiators have agreed on con-jority ale, but are at an impasse on arrangements for the transitional period leading from white to black control. No progress was percented at today's session.

Hearsay Evidence Roger Hawkins, the minister of combined operations, who oversees the conduct of the war, did not deny the authenticity of the controversial pamphlet. However, he criticized the black members for relying on "hearsay" evidence to discredit the govern-ment forces instead of blaming the guerrillas for the mounting civilian death toll- he the war. More than 2,500 noncombatant blacks have died in the conflict.

Augustine Mabika, the black member who quoted from the controversial pamphlet, said that it was one of several thousand that were dropped by government aircraft last month into the Maranke tribal trust land, close to the Mozambique-border, and into an adjoining area set aside for independent black farmers. The areas, south of the border town of Umtali have been a major center of guerrilla activity.

The pamphlet, dated Jan. 20, laid down nine new regulations, similar to those in effect in other war areas but considerably harsher. The harshest of all said. "No juveniles [to the age of 16 years] at any time, either day or night, or they will be shot." Kraal is the and opposition groups for some ident Anwar Sadat went to Jerusalem, the Palestine Liberation Organization and other Arab "rejectionists" have been assailing him as a traitor to the Palestinian cause. So it is no surprise—only another tragedy that in a Cyprus hotel lobby a couple of Palestinians assassinated an Egyptian editor and confidant of Mr. Sadat's, Youssel Sebai. The tragedy was, unfortunately, compounded by the misunderstanding that led to a shootout between Cyprict soldiers and Egyptian commandos. The PLO has been careful to keep private lines open to Cairo, and it at once denied a role in the murder —as though its public denunciations had not created the climate in which the assassins acted. Interestingly, the PLO's denial was rejected by the crowd that gathered in Cairo for the skain editor's funeral. "No more Palestine," the crowd shouted, "Arafat, Arafat, round up your dogs."

In fact, the PLO is still infected by an ambivalent attitude toward beart. When the victim is a Youssef Sebai, representing a country the PLO dares not entirely alienate, the act is disclaimed. But twice last week people were killed in Israel by timebomb explosions for which the PLO proudly claimed credit. And PLO spokesmen have also accepted responsibility for a number of recent assassinations of Palestinian "moderates" in the Israeli-occupied West Bank.

So primed with hatred and radicalism is the Palestinian fringe that, no doubt, episodes of terrorism would probably continue even if the PLO's formal goal of rendering Israel "null and void" were met. Dealing with this fringe presents a continuing opera-

Mr. Sadat declared, after the Cyprus shooting, that such an incident will not slow his quest for peace. But the Palestinians-the mainstream-have not visibly begun theirs. * * *

> Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin expressed condolences for the death of Mr. Sebai. (Is it not now possible, even necessary, for Mr. Sadat to start expressing similar condolences for Israeli victims of Palestinian terror?) Mr. Begin went on to say, however, "There are still people who believe a state can be established to be ruled by the perpetrators of acts such as we have witnessed in Cyprus today." The remark was an unworthy effort to make a debating point out of a misfortune that has nothing directly to do with the real issues lying between Egypt and Israel.

> Mr. Sadat, and other Arab moderates, after all, are not proposing to set up a Palestinian state ruled by terrorists. They realize that such a state, by its proclivity for violence and radicalism, could push the whole region into a new crisis. What they want is a limited and leashed Palestinian homeland, one with a stake in stability and growth rather than irredentism. It is precisely for seeking that sort of Palestine that Mr. Sadat has been attacked by Arab "rejectionists" and that Mr. Sebai was murdered. His assassination offered a perfect occasion for Mr. Begin to recognize as much. Instead, he played to old frozen Isreali fears.

Other U.S. Opinion

Human Rights and U.S. Aid

The State Department's annual reports on the status of human rights in countries that receive U.S. aid or buy U.S. weapons is a worthwhile effort; for an official organ of the U.S. people to spotlight violations of human rights casts an embarrassing glaro of publicity on the offenders.

Oppressive regimes are sensitive to open criticism of activities that they would prefer to keep in the dark, but in fact it is impossible to measure the precise effect that the reports have had on those regimes. The Carter administration believes that at least cosmetic improvements in human rights have occurred in 19 developing nations that were criticized in the first annual report in 1977. The 1978 report, released earlier this month, speaks of some improvements among the 105 countries that receive U.S. aid or weapons, though it concludes that repression of human rights is still widespread in the world.

These human-rights reports have no muscle; they do not require a specific U.S. response to human-rights violators on its list of countries receiving U.S. aid or weapons. So the administration is free to decide whether to apply sanctions against offending nations.

In the case of Nicaragua, ruled by the dictatorial regime of Anastasio Somoza, the United States has refused to disburse $20.1 million in authorized aid until there is significant improvement in the human-rights shortcomings noted in the 1977 report.

Critics accuse the administration of selective morality in applying sanctions against the small Central American state while imposing no penalties against other humanrights violators like Iran and South Korea. The critics are right; the moral indignation is selective . . .

Avoiding Satellite Accidents The Soviet Union opposition to forming a

UN study group on ways to avoid accidents involving nuclear-powered satellites is unsupported either by logic or facts.

Canada, which introduced the proposal, takes the reasonable position that "a stronger regime" is needed to insure against radioactive devices disintegrating and falling to earth, citing the Soviet Cosmos-954 satellite which went down in flames over northwestern Canada last month.

The Canadian government is seeking reimhursement of $2 million for the cost of searching for the debris of Cosmos-954, and the Soviet Union says it is prepared to pay for "damages." Presumably that dispute will be worked out in one way or another, but it does not get to the heart of the real problem, which is that there is no assurance that such a mishap will not occur again.

A Soviet official contends that everything necessary to regulate the peaceful uses of outer space is already contained in current agreements. But the same spokesman admitted that the Cosmos satellite was out of reach of monitoring facilities when it went down and that Soviet scientists could not determine exactly when and where it would enter the atmosphere and disintegrate.

As President Carter pointed out at the time of the incident in Canada, the danger if a nuclear satellite were to fall in a populated area of the world is obvious. There is every reason, therefore, not just to study the problem in a UN working group but to do something about making sure such a disaster cannot happen. And the Soviet Union should have as great an interest in achieving that end as any other nation in the world.

U.S. Aircraft Sales to Mideast

The Carter administration can cloak its roposed sale of advanced aircraft to Egypt and Saudi Arabia in high-sounding phrases about peace and the Mideast military halance. But the sale is no more than a determined effort to cement U.S. relations with those two extremely important Arah powers.

Of course, planes for Israel also are included in the deal, a factor in the militarybalance argument. But the aircraft destined for Esnael are meant also to grease the way through Congress for the Arab planes. Thus the key importance of the proposed sale remains the fact that the biggest share of the most sophisticated weapons would en to the Arabs, and specifically to Saudi

The Realpolitik in this can't be ignored. Egypt's President Anwar Sadat gave the Russians their walking papers and turned to the United States. The 50 F-5E fighters that the White House now wants to sell Egypt would bolster an air force decimated by Russia's refusal to provide spare parts for the Soviet planes comprising the Egyptian Air Force today. In effect, we would be rewarding Sadat for his U.S. leanings.

The sale to Saudi Arabia of 60 F-15 fighters, the most sophisticated planes in our air force inventory, is more blatant. They are a prestige item for the Saudis, weapons with capabilities beyond the defense needs of that developing country. But . . . Saudi Arabia has been a staunch supporter of the United States and each $17-million aircraft would buy a lot of $13-a-barrel oil.

Israel says the weapons sale to Egypt and Saudi Arabia would hurt peace negotiations. Granted, their unhappiness could make the Israelis more stubborn at the negotiating table. But this argument should not be overblown. After all, Israel would get 15 F-15s, in addition to the 25 it already has on order. It also would get 75 F-16 fighters. a more advanced plane than the F-5E, although less sophisticated than the F-15. Besides, most of these planes would not be delivered to the Arabs and Israelis until 1981. By that time, it is hoped, some peace agreement in the Mideast would be reached.

On Being Caught in a 'Trap Set by History'

By Ionathan Power

LONDON -Four years ago I received a letter from an Algerian living in a shanty town in Paris—a bright, ambitious girl, one of the five Algerian im-migrant-descended students at University of Nanterre. In her letter she told me she had to leave the university and take a bookkeeping job. She had turn-ed 21 and been told that unless she took French nationality-she had lived in France since she was five—she would no longer be eligible for a grant. But she could not or would not. The violence that had been steadily mounting against France's 800,000 Algerians—six murdered in one terrible month in Marseilles alone had finally convinced her she could never be French. Yet to me, she is in dress, mannerisms,

After a few months of being a bookkeeper she decided to return to Algiers. We lost touch. I wrote to her, and received no reply. In fact she had spent only a year in Algiers. Bitterly distitusioned, she had returned to Paris. But I did not know this until last week when her voice came on the phone.

aspirations more French than

A Sequel

Five years ago we recorded a long conversation. Last week we recorded a sequel. Put together they tell a fascinating story: Above all they show the stresses and strains of being caught between two worlds in a "trap set by history." "My parents came to France during the war with Algeria. They came to France to carn some money, to be given some bread. My father came first because all the men in the country had to run away so as not to be killed. The French in France were not the same as the colcnialists. In Algeria the French fought and killed everybody Arabic: In France on the other hand there were French people who wanted reace and who were against the war. We lived in a bidonville (shantytown) for about six months. It was in 1957. The bidonville caught fire. Later we moved into a maison de transit (a prefabricated house). They said it was only for a year. But we are still here. It has become a shantytown. My mother, two brothers and myself are in one

The workers who go home to Algeria for visits never tell the truth about France. They are always lying and lying. It's pride. A worker slaves all the year to get a suit, a new suitcase, a radio, some glasses too, and then he goes to Algeria. He doesn't tell how he has to live. He only speaks of France as a place where everybody can earn money.

"There is another side to our parents, too. They are always thinking of their children. I wonder why my parents are staying in France. They are staying because of us. They forget all the insults and think only of their children. They say: My life, I forget . . .
"We try to be different from our parents but we can't. We can't. We are always rejected. We look like French people but we are really Arabic Algerians." Intensity

when we are with French people

The conversation this time was no different in tone from five years ago. The same passionate intensity and the same precision. Also the same sense of fearwhich for Algerians is difficult to shake off, however educated they are.

"... When we last spoke five years ago I didn't know Algeria at all. I went back. I didn't went to live in France anymore. I looked on my country as where I could escape to. I had dreamed of it a lot. I could study in country. I was attracted by all the laws—all that was being done for the pessants and the

"I found it wasn't true. Before it was so easy to say France was to blame for the faults Algeria has. But after 16 years of independence, the bourgeois class growing and multiplying each turned to France I felt I was a year, you have to analyze the problems in another way. The fight is against my own country, not just France.

"It was difficult to act, to do anything to remedy the situation. There were spies. There was one in my own group. In the end I was so depressed I came back to France.

"Have I found peace or happiness, am I enjoying life? Not peace, not happiness but perhaps enjoying myself. When I rehuman being. In Algeria I was like a puppet." I reminded her of my earlier observation: that to me, a Briton who knows both France and Algeria, she is more French than Algerian. Why don't you accept this, I asked, and take French nationality?—at least then you'll have the freedom to demand to be treated as an equal.

"I can't become French. That would be murdering myself. I

the newest client state of superrower Communism is Ethiopia and there are no signs at all that the Soviet Union is having any trumble in telling Ethiopia what to do. To begin with, the Soviet Union has firmly recognized the primacy of Col. Mengistu. The colonel commended himself to the Communists after his Feb. 3 coup. In April, the revolutionary maga-zine published in Paris, Afrique-Asie, ran a long interview with Fidel Castro in which Castro fairly glowed about Mengistu. Mengistu's regime in Ethicpia was described by Somali President Slad Barre to Newsweek's Arnaud de Borchgrave. In campaigns for legislative elections to be held in five states on Saturday, they have made a major issue of the authoritarianism of Mrs. Gandhi's last year and a half in office.

"She imprisoned opposition leaders, remember," Prime Minister Morarji Desai, himself a former political prisoner, reminded voters at a rally in Bombay. "People were not allowed to go to court. Newspapers were gagged. She played with the Constitution."

with economic gains. "We cannot achieve everything overnight, but we are making progress," he said. "Give us time, and give us your help."

The three major states that are voting-Maharashtra, Andhra Pradesh and Kamataka—are among the few in which Mrs. Gandhi's Congress party won in elections last March, when the Janata party swept most of the populous states. In a land where regionalism is always a danger the party now wants to show that iso has strength elsewhere.

The stakes are also high for Mrs. Gandhi, who has spent the last few weeks making as many as two dozen appearances a day on behalf of her new political party. This will be its first electoral test since it split away from the regular Congress party. The new party, which Mrs. Gandhi says she regards as the 'real Congress," is known as Congress-I (for Indira). Like the Janata and the regular Congress party, it has candidates in nearly all of the 992 contests in the five states, which have one-fourth of India's population.

Mrs. Gandhi is campaigning on the charges that the Desal government has reversed the economic gains achieved during her 11 years in office, and that it is stifling the rights of individuals, particularly the poor, and such minorities as the untouchables.

"There is a new atmosphere of fright across the land," she said at a rally in Maharashtra. "Freedom is gone from India now." She said her opponents, in their frequent references to the state of emergency that she declared in June, 1975, were "beating a dead

According to Mr. Zalkin, the main job of the classes is to give workers the economic and political basis to "consciously understand how production works."

But the classes are also clearly designed to turn workers against "Western propaganda"—Western views, for instance, that are beamed into the Soviet Union in foreign radio broadcasts. politicians have changed their fashion image. The reason? A combination of television, women's votes and President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's lean elegance.

For the majority, the uniform is a dark navy pin-striped suit, white shirt and discreet tie. Mr. Giscard d'Estaing, who did not mind being photographed in turtleneck sweater or football shorts when he was campaigning, has now reverted to a totally classic image. His last fashion foray was a couple of years ago when he wore a green velvet dinner jacket at an Elysée special function, a move which greatly upset his men guests.

Though they have spruced up their image, the Communists still stick to a sporty look. They often go for tweed jackets with back vents which do not project as bourgeois a look as the majority's uniform. Even from photographs, it is also easy to tell that the Communist leaders' clothes are made of cheep synthetics instead of expensive, esablishment cashmere

The main difference, according to Vogue, between majority and Communist figures is their ties. Those of the former are always subtle and subdued whereas the Communists' are definitely and deliberately splashy.

Charm Leaders

Then you have what Le Point calls the "charm leaders," such as Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber and Jacques Chaban-Delmas, who have always wanted to project an athletic, smiling Americ style image. But that is definitely passe now, thanks to Mr. Giscard d'Estaing's very French and alightly uptight figure.

some years now the Teatro Comunale here has enjoyed a reputation as one of the bestrun, most serious and venturesome opera houses in Italy. Much of the merit was due to general manager Carlo Maria Badini, who has now moved on to Milan to run La Scala.

BERLIN, Feb. 22 (IHT).—Bertold Brecht, from his arrival in Flast Berlin in 1948 until his death there in 1956, provided the German Democratic Republic with its No. 1 international cultural attraction. He and his actress wife Helene Weigel also founded the Berliner Ensemble, a repertory theater dedicated primarily to the works of Brecht himself, which, during its finest period, ranked, for quality, with ater and Dublin's legendary Abbey Players. Last week, the Beriiner Ensemble celebrated Brecht's 80th birthday with a

The Berliner En-semble thas already presented the later version twice, lucluding the 1967 production by Erich Engels, designed by Caspar Nebler, with Ernst Busch giving the performance of his life in the little role.

Manfred Welswerth, the new in-tentions, and Joachim Tenschert -both of them close co-workers of Brecht for many years-have staged it, with sets by Hans-Unich Schmückle, costumes by Spits Busse, and, netwally, the music specially composed for it many years ago by Hanns Elsler. To make the occasion as gala as possible, television carried the performance throughout East Germany on opening night, iners and West Germans as

Soviet Milk Lovers Defy Cholesterol

By Kevin Klose

MOSCOW (WP).-For anyone wary of the nasty ways of cholesterol and intent upon keeping whatever may remain of a youthful figure, Russian life poses certain edible but unnerving prob-

Rich creamy butters, sour creams, sweet and creamed cheeses, soured milks, condensed, baked and evaporated milks, cheese spreads, yogurts, ice creams—a cornucopia from the cow offering nothing but trouble or waistline and blood vessels of the dairy stores of this city for much of the year. Only a tiny portion of the daily dairy output in the capital is converted to the kind of skim milk products that crowd refrigerator cases of most American supermarkets. Skimmed products, according to the general director of the city's largest dairy, are "mostly for those needing special diets."

The rest of Moscow is supplied with milk that is at least 2-percent butterfat and ranges up to 6 per cent. Sour creams (smetana) and sour milks (kefir) in endless varieties contain similar fat levels. Sweet cheese, a Russian specialty in many flavors, runs routinely between 30 and 55-per-cent butterfat.

When dairy director Nikolai Antonov mentioned those percentages, his eyes shone. Milk Is Balanced "Nature made milk a balanced nutrition to be used without tampering," he said. "Everything in it is balanced—the fat, salts and proteins." He literally waved away questions about the possible ill effects of cholesterol, a fatty substance in the bloodstream linked to the consumption of animal fats and which many scientists in the United States, and Russia as well, are certain contributes to hardening of the arteries, a lifeshortening disease. ed; varyenichici, dough-wrapped tidhits of sweet cheese, and blini, the famous Russian crêpes. In addition, Russian soups such as borscht are garnished with smetana and somehow it isn't right to eat bread plain. Whether black, brown, rye or the much sought-after varieties of white, bread is best under a thick layer of butter or sweet cheese.

Drinking milk in half-liter packets costs about 22 cents for the 3-per-cent variety and 32 cents for the favored 6-per-cent grade. Sweet cheeses in 100gram packets range in price from about 20 cents to about 35 cents. Sour creams and milks show a similar price range.

Milk's Life

In the United States, advances in handling and refrigeration over the past 30 years have steadily extended the useful life of fresh milk so it is not unusual for an unopened carton to last 8 to 10 days in the refrigerator before spoiling. Although Mr. Antonov emphasized that Soviet dairies employ similar modern tech-niques, fresh milk here normally doesn't last beyond a few days. When asked about this, he looked baffled and retorted, "Women buy milk each day."

During the summer, sterlized milk, which rivals U.S. fresh milk in longevity, is a great favorite. (Many foreigness here order their milk in weekly batches from Finland. Although more expensive, Finnish milk lasta much longer in the carton than local milk) Triangular heavy paper containers began replacing milk bottles here in 1966, although the specialty products like sour cream, baked milk and yogurt are sold in a variety of returnable glass bottles. Mr. Antonov says he much prefers the water containers and longs f . . day when all his dairy product are produced that way. Bottles are hard to care for. They must be collected and washed and they are not as easy or economical to transport panion of such calorie-loaded as the packets. But some people are conservative and afraid of (Americans, on the other hand, consumed 267 pounds per person in 1976, according to the National Dairy Council.) Dairy director Antonov says his factory will continue experimenting with new products to push the average even higher. The dairy has introduced new cheese spreads featuring fish, hot pepper, lemon and other flavors. But what are the additives in a packet of sweet, lemon-flavored cheese? No ingredients are listed on the label. "Everyth natural." Mr. Antonov says. "Everything's

Ready to Aid the Franc

GENEVA, Feb. 22 (AP-DJ). Western European nations have quietly prepared themselves to come to the aid of the French. ent should fears of a leftist victory in the forth-coming National Assembly elections lead to heavy outflows of capital and a run on the franc. Sources said that European central banks have indicated their willingness: to extend standby credits to France in case of need. This willingness was expressed at a meeting of central bankers in Basel last week at the Bank for International Settlements. It is not clear whether the United States and Japan, which also are represented at the Basel central bankers meetings every month, are part of the sid plan. Moreover, the sources said that to view of the relative recent stability of the French currency after a bout of fitters, the central bankers apparently have not decided on the details of the proposed standby credit arrangements pending a clear need for

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (IHT).— The stock market, troubled by the continuing stalemate in coal industry talks, drifted to a mixed finish today with a rash of merger news providing the only spark to an otherwise dull session

A mild morning rally failed to gain momentum, reflecting con-cern about the impact of a prolonged miners' strike on the economy market analysis said,

Also holding back the market was the government's report that new factory orders for durable goods fell 4.4 per cent in Jenuary, the analysts said.

The Dow Jones industrial average was down 0.26 point at 749.05. It was up 0.60 at 3 p.m.

About 730 issues gained, with about 510 lower. Volume totaled 18.45 million shares, compared with 21.89 million yesterday.

Analysts attributed a small early gain in past to a leveling of the dollar on foreign exchanges in Enrope following a recent plunge to record lows. They said the gain was also assisted by internal forces dollowing a long stock market decline.

By the end of the trading day in Europe, the dollar showed some losses, but a display of central bank activity helped keep the

Glut of Oil Cuts Output

NEW YORK, Feb. 22 (AP-DJ). The world oil glut is bringing a sharper plunge in oil output for metals to $9.3 billion. the 13-member oil cartel than had been anticipated. New figures obtained from the Sandi Arabian government show that oil exports by the Gulf kingdom, leading producer in the Organisation of Petroleum Exporting Countries, fell to near a twoyear low in January.

This, in turn, was the major factor in a fall in OPEC's total production to around 29 million barrels a day last month. That was the lowest level since Janua-ry, 1977, when the cartel was involved in a price split. Output had been to 32.5 million barrels a day in December, according to oil industry estimates.

Iran, the second largest producer in OPEC, saw its oil output fall nearly 1.1 million barrels a day in January from the December level of 6.4 million barrels a Venezuela reported that for the first few weeks of 1978 its oil output was running only about 1.7 million barreis a day, down sharple from the 2.2 million barrels a day it had been producing for much of 1977. The cutbacks in Venezuela have raised some concern there whether oil revenues will continue to be enough to finance the government's spending programs.

W. German Economy Seen Growing 1.5% BERLIN, Feb. 22 (Reuters) .-

The West German economy has moved onto a growth course again after the pause of last year, the West Berlin Economic research Institute said today. In its latest weekly report, it estimated that gross national product would grow by a real 1.5 per cent in the first quarter of this year over the previous three months. This would follow a rise of the same amount, adjusted for seasonal and working day differences, in the fourth quarter of last year, it said.

INTERSTATE PERSPECTIVES

Interstate Investments is e multi-national investment management organization with an established record of service and reliability.

Over the past decade, we et Interstate have correctly forecast the principal trend in the market from time to time so that our clients not only made money in the Searing Sixties, but also conserved their capital and increased its value in the Turbulent Seventies.

Our publication INTERSTATE PERSPECTIVES has, in the Seventies, become one of the world's leading publications analysing and forecasting the trends in the classical investment instruments; industrial shares, bonds, money markets, gold and gold shares, in which we deal exclusively.
INTERSTATE PERSPECTIVES is designed to advise both large and small investors of the prevailing trend of financial markets in the principal marketplaces of the world, as well as making specific recommendations to buy and sell securities or hold cash or gold.

Our statisticians and analysis continuously study economic, financial and political developments, in the principal industrial countries which effect their markets, ranking those countries which we consider et any given time to be in the top ten according to investmentmerit, with particular emphasis on the United States, Europe and Japan.
Our weekly letters function as evaluable guide to subscribers in making their investment commitments in specific securities in specific countries and over the years they have consistently enabled investors to conserve their capital and earn a return on it on recognized stock exchanges, money markets and in gold.

- In the Spring of 1969 we advised clients to sell their industrial stocks in New York completely thus making money and conserving it.
- In 1970 we advised clients to purchase gold and gold shares (50 per cent of portfolio assets) while continuing to conserve the balance of their capital.
- In 1974 we advised clients to sell gold and gold shares, again to conserve profits made.
- In 1975 we again edvised the purchase of industrial shares in New York.
- But that is the past! What about now and 1978? Whet about Japan - France? Will the price of gold move up to U.S. $600 per ounce? You can receive our views on these and other questions, as well as specific investment recommendations.
- The fact that our advice has produced excellent results over the past difficult decade does not, of course, prove that it will produce similar results during the period ahead, however, we believe that it

No wonder there are drivers in those leafy lanes who have been known to swerve in the hope of bagging themselves a logger (just as there has been at least one jogger known to have run over a car, leaving three large dents in the hood, the roof and the trunks. As the felicitously named Mr. Fixx observes, health through running may be viewed in some quarters as a threat to the very fabric of American civilization

Actually, I confess that I've taken a turn or two around the block myself, and as far I can see there may be something to all the claims that running is not only physically beneficial but also good for the mind. Obviously, it's as efficient a way as there is of expending calories, and why this is ignored by all those people who are trying to thin down by decreasing the income of food instead of increasing the outgo, is just incomprehensible. Plus it's simple and requires a bare minimum in the way of facilities and special equipment -just the surface of the globe and a proper pair of shoes

BRIDGE.

By Alan Trusc

Nobody has ever written a book about the most difficult part of the game of bridge: discarding in defense. Most of the authors who have dealt with defense in general have little to say on this subject, perhaps because it is difficult to give meaningful ad-

In general a defender does not need to keep length in a suit untess one of his opponents has length in the same department. But he should try to keep matching length in significant suits, four to match four end five to metch five. This is relatively easy when the suit is in the dummy, but less easy when the defender is trying to match presumed length in the closed hand. But general rules can be highly deceptive. They deceived East on the diagramed deal, and one can-not help sympathizing with him. He faced an extremely difficult problem, and fell into a most unususi trap. Six ohibs would have been an unbestable contract for North-South, but six no-trump, scoring a little more, was the obvious contract at match-points and was reached in practice. At first sight this slam seems unbeatable, but a little thought will show that a winning defense is available.

The bidding followed a natural course after North made a light opening bid of one club. With considerable defensive prospects. West was not inclined to jeopardize anything with his opening lead. At the first workout on Friday, he will introduce his program of exercises and running, with a supplement of weight lifting for those who desire it.

There'll probably be just a few exercises in the beginning, but more later when they see what it can do for them," said manager Joe Torre of the weight work. Mastropasqua says he has about 10 players interested already. "I don't want to force anyone to do something he doesn't feel comfortable with, but if I can offer logical motivation for im-provement, why shouldn't a player take advantage of it?" he asked. Said Torre:

"Paul helped extend my career. After the 1975 season, when I only hit 247, I had shoulder and back problems and I was 35 years old. I had been leary about weight lifting, but I put myself in Paul's hands at the Downtown Athletic Club.

Years ago, Liquori noted, lureign athletes used the U.S. indoor season as a training exercise. Now, he added, foreigners are cashing in on the competitive opportunities as well as the monetary rewards from meet promoters. "Most of these meet promoters are married to foreigners because ol the AAU commitment," said Jim Elliott, the highly respected college coach at Villanova. they make commitments to these runners for five or six meets. The promoters have to ballyhoo them at the expense of the Americans."

Dick Buerkle, who set a world indoor mlle record of 3:54.9 last month, has been the only American to win an invitation mile or 1,500 race this winter. However, Buerkle suffered a leg injury last week while training in Buffslo, N.Y., that could wipe out his competitive year. Until this season, the 30-year-old Buerkle was known more for his performances Rt 5,000 meters.

Elliott termed the foreign mvn sion "a healthy situation because it makes us get off our dead butts." But Liquori said meet promoters drew up double stimdards for 3:56 foreign milers and 3:56 milers from this country.

"Everybody is appreciated more quori said of the relatively ovscure status of such world-class American milers as Steve Scott, Mike Slack and Joe Rudina. "It was a great stanulus to the American economy to bring in Japanese-made television sets at one time." Liquori sald. "But now the situation is getting out of hand because the market is flooded. Some American athlotes have said privately that foreigners should not be allowed to compete in the AAU championships. Most countries do not reciprocate, they argue, even during the summer when American athletes traditionally tour Europe.

"I sympathize with the AAU." sald Liquori, who has run the mile outdoors in 3;522. "They want the crowd of 18,000 for the Garden, but is their sympathy to raise money or run a national championship? I don't know."

Rubio, 24, was taken to n hospital in a coma last Friday night after being knocked out in the seventh round of a title fight with Spanish middleweight champion Francisco Rodriguez.

He underwent an emergency operation to remove a cerebral blockage but never regained consciousness, a hospital statement said.

But then the Somalis kicked the Russians out, and we made a promise to arm them in their fight with Ethionia. When the Soviets were booted out of Somalia they decided to help the Ethiopians kick the Somalis out of the Ogaden desert."

"How did they do it?" she wanted to know.

"By bringing in the Cubans to fight with the Ethiopians against the Somalis. They also gave the Ethiopians a hillion dollars in arms. In that way the Soviets hope to shift the balance of power in East Africa."

Her eyes started to glaze. Western allies in the area, particularly Iran and Saudi Arabia, are worried that if Ethiopia becomes strong, it will not only drive the Somalis out of the desert but will invade Somalia itself. But the United States has been assured by the Soviets that they won't permit this to happen. At the same time, we don't want to give Somalia arms because

Belgium's Live-Minnow-Eating Festival

GERAARDSBERGEN, Belgium (IHT).—.
The recipe is simple: Catch a gron?:: ing 12 Gotius minutus, a cyprinid mianow about the size of a half-smoked cigarette), Pour red wine into shallow silver chalice. Immerse live minnow in wine. Attach napkin to collar (minnow kicks). Look reasonably brave. Ingest, Remember to wipe moustache. Plastic mug will do instead of silver chalice if indulger is not a member of Geraardsbergen's temporal or clerical establishment.

The minnows are eaten on Krakelingenjeest, the last Sunday of February, along with krakelingen, doughnut-shaped, unleavened buns thrown from the Oudenberg in the Flemish Ardennes, 110 meters above sea level, to the eager crowd of a thousand below.

"You don't generally eat the krakelingen," s man said. "If you catch one, you keep it as a souvenir or for luck, potency and fertility."

The Geraardsbergen festival coming up this Sunday is bizarra, even by Belgian standards, and its origins are shrouded in prehistoric mist. It appears that the Nervil celebrated their rites of spring on the hillton with Druids leading the way uphill and distributing wine and bread at the summit. The name Oudenberg does not, as might be assumed, mean "old hill" but the "hill of Odon," a pre-Roman, pre-Christian Celtic deity. Caesar overcame the Nervii, Odon faded from Odon's Hill and Ceres, the Roman fertility goddess, seems to have taken over as patroness of the festivities. As Christianity moved in from England, Ireland and Gaul. Ceres gave way to the Virgin.

PAGAN WINE-Geraardsbergen notable sips wine alive with gudgeons in ceremony dating to pagan past.

The early Christians used the image of a fish as an important symbol. But scholars have no evidence that there is a connection to today's fish ritual.

Better documented is the fact that the men of Ghent laid a lengthy siege to the town in the late 14th century and that, by 1380, surrender seemed inevitable. The supplies inside the walls were almost gone. Bot one man had an idea: Gather whatthe city, and throw them over the wall into the river Dender. The examy would perhaps believe that Geraardsbergen was well supplied and decide to move on.

Some stale bread and some soured herrings were brought together and casually dumped into the river. The trick worked and the Ghent army withdrew. A barrel of tar was lighted as a signal to countryside alties to bring in bread, wine and more l'rring.

(The trick worked once but not twice: In 1381, the Gentengars were back and this time they sacked and pillaged.)

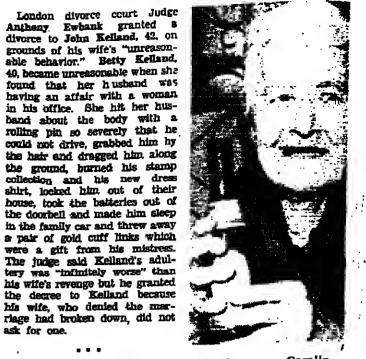

Is the minnow-gulping rite commemorative of those herrings jettisoned in 1380? Anyone's guess. By 1392 the Geraardsbergen ceremonies were referred to as a

The Krakelingenjeest opens in the midafternoon with a costumed procession through town and uphili to the top of the Oudenberg, headed by magistrates, clergy and men dressed as white-robed Druids and medieval hornblowers. The bonfire Tonnekenbrand signal is sent at 8 p.m. and quickly acknowledged from surrounding hilltops as the Geraardsbergen citizens celebrate. When the fire has died down, they go downhill, in a torchlight parade. Plemish taverns stay open late on festival

There has been one sad break in the tradition," said a policeman posted on the mountain top. "It used to be de riqueus that the minnows were Flemish minnows caught in the Dender. Now we have to import our grondelingen from the river Dyle in Brabant. The Dender is too pointed these days."

'Wolf in Sheep's Clothing' Fools Ant Defenders of Aphid

By Walter Sullivan

VEW YORK INYT).—An insect that tears fuzzy material from its prey to become "a wolf in sheep's clothing" has been discovered by Cornell University researchers. Thus disguised, it feeds among its victims, un-molested by their ant defenders.

The insect is the larva of a green lacewing that preys on a woolly variety of aphid found on alder leaves. As adults, the many species of lacewing are characterized by lacy wings and their larvae often feed on aphids. This, however, appears to be the first instance among such insects where the predstors clothe themselves to mimic their

In the Cornell studies the ant trails were traced to their underground nests. On the way to and from the nests the ants fled any disturbance, such as the poke of a finger, but while guarding the aphids they attacked with a tenacious bite.
